

Space4Women Mentor Program Code of Conduct

The success of the Space4Women Mentor Program is due to the dedication, planning, and initiative of both the Mentors and the Mentees. In addition to the Mentorship Program Guidelines document which establishes participation requirements, this document lays out the responsibilities and behavior expected of participants in the Mentorship Program.

The Space4Women Mentor Program Code of Conduct is in place to protect the rights of both the mentors and mentees, and to prevent impropriety or the appearance of impropriety on the part of the United Nations Office for Outer Space Affairs, Space4Women, and the participating mentors and mentees. This document addresses conduct expectations related to the following topics:

- Mentor and Mentee interactions
- Representation and social media (including restrictions on the use of the UN logo)

Please read the document carefully. The Mentor Program Code of Conduct must be signed and returned to participate in the Space4Women Mentor Program.

For clarification or answers to any question not addressed here, please contact the Space4Women team at space4women@un.org.

Mentor and Mentee interactions

- Both Mentors and Mentees will respect and act according to the principles set out in the Charter of the United Nations, including respect for fundamental human rights, in the dignity of the human person, and in the equal rights of people, regardless of gender.
- Mentors and Mentees participate in this program on a volunteer basis, for the pursuit of professional and educational goals, and to advance equity and representation in the space sector. Neither Mentors nor Mentees should use their participation in this program as a means of financial gain, or as a means to advance their external personal interests (including companies they own, products they have developed, or social media presence) unrelated to the program.
- Mentors and Mentees should have the best interest at heart to participate fully in the program, abiding by the guidelines set out in the “Mentor Program Guidelines” document.
- Mentors and Mentees should agree on a format and frequency of communication that suits them best (such as email, monthly meetings, etc.) and respect the time that each of them commits to the program by making every effort to engage and respond to these communications. If you have difficulty getting in contact with your Mentor/ Mentee, please contact the Space4Women staff.

- The Mentee is responsible for identifying and pursuing their own goals and working with the mentor as support in achieving these. The Mentor is commits to using their personal and professional experience and suggesting resources to meet the needs of the Mentee.
- Mentors and Mentees will respect the confidentiality of their discussions and each other's privacy and personal boundaries. This includes not sharing information about the other person on social media or in other publications without their permission.
- Participants in the program must report to staff any breach of the United Nations' Rules and Regulations against abusive or exploitative behavior, including but not limited to: discrimination, any form harassment including sexual or gender harassment, discrimination, or abuse of authority. Any form of discrimination, harassment, exploitation, or abuse of authority will not be tolerated and will result in appropriate action.

Representation and social media (including restrictions on the use of the UN logo)

- Neither Mentors nor Mentees may represent themselves as an employee or official representative of the United Nations of UNOOSA.
- You may not issue any statement on behalf of the UN or UNOOSA, nor speak on behalf of the entire Space4Women program.
- However, this is not to discourage you from speaking about your work with Space4Women or the program. You do not need written or verbal permission from UNOOSA to discuss or share information about Space4Women on your personal social media accounts, blogs, or in your own presentations.
- Simply put, we encourage you to talk about your work and your involvement with Space4Women, but please only post content on behalf of yourself as an individual participant in the Space4Women Mentor Program.
